Skolars' CEO Colin Browne

A warm welcome to everyone here today, especially to the players, directors and supporters of Doncaster. Last year's game between the two side here at New River was a thrilling draw. Hopefully, it will be just as entertaining a game today, hopefully with an even better result.

That game was played as our Friday Night Lights game the night before the Challenge Cup final and this year's game is less than a fortnight away. We will have an allocation of tickets for the ground at the other end of White Hart Lane and it promises to be a big weekend for the sport in the borough of Haringey, with a junior festival taking place here on the Saturday morning.

Results have been disappointing over the last few weeks. With a few players out at the moment, there were just four players in the line-up who'd played ten or more games for us and four more who've passed double figures in appearance for other clubs at this level or above. Our youngsters are learning fast, but it is a tough introduction for them. Hopefully, some of our more experienced players will be back today.

Off-field, I am writing this midweek, but we are due to take delivery of our new scoreboard on Friday. This has been purchased in part by many of you, thanks to the "Pay-It-Forward" scheme that many of you contributed to last year. Thanks again for that support!

Enjoy the Game

The Big O

Huw Richards on a RL legend from Doncaster

In 70 years in the RFL, Doncaster have understandably drawn much more on the heartlands of the West Riding than their own district. And perhaps the most distinguished league player from Doncaster, Rossington-born Ted Slevin, lived there only for the first 18 months of his life.

One of the stalwart forwards of the 1950s, Slevin undoubtedly benefited from that childhood move to Wigan. It was with the Cherry and Whites that he took massive early steps towards his greatest single distinction, as one of only five players – and the first Englishman following the Welshmen Aubrey Casewell and Alan Edwards – to win all six trophies possible, the Championship, Challenge Cup and the Yorkshire and Lancashire League and Cup, in the 'Four Cup' era.

That his achievement reflected collective as much as individual accomplishment was in keeping with being, as Huddersfield chairman William Cunningham wrote in his 1961 testimonial brochure, 'the perfect team man'.

He appears in contemporary accounts as a selfless forward grafter and unpretentious enabler of others in an age when contested scrums made matches a real grind. He scored only six tries in 396 appearances for the Fartowners up to the end of the 1960-1 season, but as the club's Rugby Leaguer correspondent wrote 'When Huddersfield scored a try from a play-the-ball or from loose play, Ted Slevin invariably had a hand in it'.

That six-trophy feat was completed early in his career. He made his debut for Wigan in January 1949 and had won all four Cups with them by the end of the 1950-1 season, most notably the Championship claimed in 1950 by defeating Huddersfield with a team lacking eight players who had already departed for the tour of Australia.

Huddersfield doubtless remembered that final when they signed him in October 1951. He won the Yorkshire League that season, followed by the Yorkshire and Challenge Cups in 1952-3, their best season since the dominant era either side of the First World War. He continued to work in Wigan, initially as a miner and from 1959 in a canning factory. With the M62 still long in the future this meant five hour return treks to training and home matches, but he became a constant feature of Huddersfield teams over the next decade. Few clubs have fielded more league giants, making his selection for the Huddersfield Hall of Fame not long after his death in 1998 testament to a fine career.

As Wigan legend Joe Egan recalled "The mystery to me is how he was ever allowed to leave Central Park". He had been a regular at prop or second row in two hugely successful seasons.

Another mystery is a truncated international career – two games for England and two Great Britain v France matches which were denied full test status. As a prop he had to compete with two undoubted giants – Ken Gee and Alan Prescott. But AN Gaulton, compiler of the testimonial brochure, noted a further reason. Yorkshire-born and Lancashire-raised might have struck Gaulton as 'a good combination', but for Slevin proved something of a Catch-22.

The county championship was an important rung on the ladder. Slevin played as a novice for Lancashire in 1949. Called up for Yorkshire after joining Huddersfield, he fell victim to a recent rule change preventing players from playing for more than one county.

Yorkshire may have been unable to claim him, but Doncaster can and should regard him with pride.

Skolars 25 years ago

With the winter season having finished at the start of the month, the summer season came with a two week break.

Skolars were due to play in the first round of games in the new Southern Conference, playing as North London Skolars. However, with Kingston dropping out they would have to wait another week before they made their debut. Elsewhere in the Southern Conference, there were wins for Worcester Royals, Cambridge Eagles and West London Sharks.

Skolars' Head Coach Joe Mbu

Welcome to everyone here today.

It's been a tough last three weeks. Our last game at New River saw us score some good tries again, but we lost focus in defence at key moments of the game. The trip to Keighley and a heavy defeat underlined the challenge this squad has this season. With Phil Lyon, Lamont Bryan and Olly Bloom out injured, it was a very young side that played against a very, very experienced team. The youngsters will have learnt a lot from that experience and will be stronger for it.

Last week against Swinton Lions, we did show we can put pressure on the opposition at times and can play some attractive rugby, but conceding points in the last minute of the first half again put the opposition out of reach.

Doncaster also had a torrid time last Sunday, losing 0-46 at home to North Wales Crusaders. I'm sure Richard Horne will be expecting a positive reaction from his side to that defeat, but it's also an opportunity for our side to seize the initiative in today's game.

Enjoy the game.

Head Coach Richard Horne is in his sixth season in charge at the club, having moved partway through 2017 from Hull where he was assistant coach. He played his entire club career for Hull, as well as 12 appearances for Great Britain. He played in the 2005 Challenge Cup winning side (that final being played in Cardiff whilst Wembley was being rebuilt). He's assembled an experience squad with a number of internationals as the Dons seek to improve on their fourth place in 2019.

Centre Jason Tali played for Papua New Guinea in the 2013 World Cup before joining Newcastle Thunder in 2015, moving to Doncaster two years later. He scored a hat-trick against Skolars in a drawn game five years, a result that led to the vacancy that Horne was to fill.

Fellow Papua New Guinean Watson Boas made his debut for his country against Fiji in 2016 scoring two tries. The scrum half was then playing for PNG Hunters in the Queensland Cup, moving to the UK to play for Featherstone Rovers in 2019. He played for Doncaster on loan that season, joining permanently the following year.

Centre/winger Misi Taulapapa played for Samoa in the 2008 World Cup. He was playing for Cronulla Sharks in the NRL at the time. The 39 year old joined Sheffield Eagles in 2010 spending six seasons there before spells at Featherstone Rovers and Newcastle Thunder, joining the Dons this season. Whilst the name Poching will be familiar, half-back/hooker Kobe Poching is a youngster who recently joined Doncaster on loan from Wakefield Trinity, where his father Willie is coach.

Aaron Ollett and Ross Whitmore both played 20 games for the Dons last season. 29 year old Ollett came through Hull

KR's junior ranks, making his debut for them in 2014 after a loan spell with Gateshead Thunder. The loose forward then had spells at Keighley, Dewsbury and Newcastle before joining Doncaster last season. 20 year old Whitmore made his debut last season as well, though the forward had a very different route to Ollett, having moved from RU side Yorkshire Carnegie.

Head to Head

Last season's encounter at New River was the Friday Night Lights game. Doncaster took an early lead with Ben Johnson making a break from 20 metres out with Sam Smeaton in support to finish the move. Skolars levelled the scores with a similar move, this time Neil Thorman backing up to touchdown after Jacob Thomas edged past the defence. Thomas then set up Aaron Small to score and with Neil Thorman kicking a penalty after the hooter, Skolars led 12-6 at half-time.

Skolars extended the lead with another Thorman penalty. Doncaster narrowed the gap when Matty Beharrell floated a long pass out to the left for Sam Doherty. Beharrell's conversion hit the posts; a miss that turned out to be important. He converted Ben Howe's try to put his side in the lead.

Ben Howe he went for a high ball in attack. The full-back joined the attacking line on the right to touchdown in the resulting set. This time Beharrell's kick was successful putting the Dons into the lead for the first time in the match. Another Thorman penalty levelled it at 16 all, but then the Dons had two drop-goal chances before the hooter sounded.

When the cap doesn't fit

David Ballheimer on the failures of the salary cap

OK, I admit it, I am biased and my teams play in a very small rugby league market, so opponents of my opinion use it to dispute my assertions. Put simply, the salary cap needs to be reined in and strictly enforced throughout the professional game.

The original salary cap in Super League was enforced quite stringently with a number of clubs falling foul of the limit and suffering fines and, on a few occasions, points deductions. It could be said that Wigan Warriors got off very lightly as they were repeat offenders, the second transgression coming when they broke their cap limit to sign two quality players who helped the club avoid relegation.

When one looks at the punishment the NRL inflicted on Melbourne Storm (or English Rugby Union on Premiership powerhouse Saracens), relegation would have been a reasonable penalty. Of course, this is rugby league and Wigan are, well, Wigan; join the dots. These Super League clubs had the resources to overcome the fines and didn't break the cap for years after this.

Salary caps were instituted in lower divisions too, but they were loosened at the request of clubs desperate to taste the honey of a higher level. It started in the early 2010s when Leigh Centurions persuaded the RFL to expand the salary cap in the Championship, and grew when Toronto joined League 1. The Wolfpack wage bill was greater than most teams in the division above them but, sadly, it didn't end well for them; actually, spectacularly badly was something of an understatement.

Toronto's arrival in 2017 saw the salary caps in League One and the Championship revised to accommodate them. The Wolfpack blasted through League 1, blew the Million Pound Game in their second season and won it in year three. Then came Covid and the harsh reality of serious financial scrutiny. Forced to stay in England, visa issues resulted in players returning to the southern hemisphere, and most others not being paid. After half a dozen losses in Super League they disappeared, owing tens of thousands of pounds to numerous players.

Other clubs in lower divisions went to the very limit of the expanded salary cap and suddenly found they had overspent. One club went into administration less than a month of winning promotion to the Championship, not their first financial meltdown of the summer rugby era. Another club, currently in the Championship, has suffered multiple insolvencies yet still seem able to sign high-profile, normally high-earning, players despite these financial woes.

There is a strong argument that a sport's governing body should not have to force their clubs to behave with fiscal responsibility, but history shows that they do. Sadly, greed conquers all, and the lust for glory and success blinds clubs to the harsh realities of financial security.

Skolars 20 years ago - The Rugby League Conference (which had developed from the Southern Conference that had started 5 years before) kicked off with two games against sides that had become big rivals. They travelled to West London Sharks with two long range tries for Charlie Oyeade putting his side ahead. They sealed the game when Trevor O'Loughlin intercepted 5 metres from his own try line, slipping the ball out to Jake Johnstone who raced 90 metres to score, Skolars running out 10-38 winners. They then put in a commanding display at home to Crawley Jets winning 48-10

Dave Farrar on Rugby League, Philosophy and London

Expansion? What is it good for?

Well we have tried the big bang with Big City transcontinental Toronto and are now experimenting with the micro County version with Cornwall. You have to give to our game we never know hon to quit. The London experiment still survives 40 years on but is not in rude health by any definition.

I am currently in Newcastle and the transplant of a RL side into an established RU club seems to bearing fruit if a little slowly, it seems to be a better fit than the Broncos Harlequins marriage.

West Wales limps along with no obvious sense of direction or improvement but the Coventry Midlands move has at least not affected their playing side.

One wonders if the World Cup will provide more impetus on the long history of attempts at Rugby League at expansion?

Enjoy the game!

This week our Under 14s take on Brentwood Eels on the Perth Road pitches.

After a tough game against a very good and very big Under 14's St Albans set up last week, Skolars have recruited some big guns mid-week and the boys hope to improve on this outing.

The Under 16s have had a couple of weeks rest and have a game next week against Bromley Bengals away. Bromley are based across the lane from the home of the South London Silverbacks Men's team who have sadly folded for this season.

Skolars A team went to Medway Dragons last Saturday short on numbers but big in heart. Our hosts dominated and won 62-12. However, it was a good game, and despite the score line there were some competitive moments. Three of our Under 17's players Archie Walker, Brandon Barrife and Omarion Smith got to play full games, Smith bagging two tries and taking the Man of the Match award for the Skolars.

Sadly, this week's A team game has been cancelled.

Skolars 15 years ago

Featherstone Rovers travelled to New River having lost to Skolars the previous season. There was to be no repeat as Rovers ran in 11 tries to win 6-62 with Corey Simms scoring Skolars only try, converted by Will Webster.

Last season Barrow were complaining about a long trip to Workington midweek, but 15 years ago Skolars had to travel to Barrow midweek, due to Barrow's run in the Challenge Cup. A mere 570 mile round trip. Skolars had 5 players making their debut, the youngest being 17 year old Douglas Hann. Barrow won 38-8 with Skolars' try scorers being Martyn Benson and Webster.

Skolars 10 years ago

Another trip to Cumbria 10 years ago, this time at a weekend. The opposition were Whitehaven. Ill discipline early on saw Whitehaven enjoy sustained possession as they ran in two early tries. James Anthony was quick to react after a failed intercept attempt by the home side, getting the ball out to the wing for Ade Adebisi to score against the club he played at for two seasons. However, when Mike Worrincey was sin-binned Andreas Bauer scored straight away to put the home side 18-6 up at the break. They went further ahead but when Dave Arnot and Carl Sice were sin-binned for fighting, Skolars started to find gaps and with tries for Brad Hopkins and Dave Williams. Skolars lost 36-28 but gained a bonus point. The game saw Joe Mbu (in his first spell as coach) dust off his boots after a 12 month break

Skolars 5 years ago

Skolars played Doncaster at the start of May 2017, though that game was at the Don's Keepmoat Stadium. Jason Tali scored a hat-trick for the home side and with half an hour remaining they were 28-10 ahead and Skolars were down to 12 men for 10 minutes following Simon Vavega's despatch to the sin-bon. However, two tries for Sadiq Abebiyi and one for Dave Williams, Skolars drew level thanks to JyMel Coleman's fourth conversion. The last seven minutes saw a missed long range penalty kick from Coleman and two missed drop-goal attempts from Charlie Lawrence, but the draw saw Don's coach Gary Thornton lose his job.

They then entertained Whitehaven but couldn't turn possession into points in the first half. Adebisi's try with 6 minutes remaining saw them 6 points behind, but a late converted try and a penalty saw the Cumbrians win 14-28.
